Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2012. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English. Brand new Book. The Authors describe how to create a very efficient money-making organization to survive and thrive in today's tough business environment by becoming a "World Class" Organization. In today's fast-paced rapidly changing business environment your Company can no longer just count on the Business Leader or even the Leadership Team to manage the business. You must involve all your employees in the success of your Company. Your van driver is no longer just a driver. He or she must come to work every day seeking better ways to do his or her job. Every employee must be aware of the processes they use to execute their duties and continually be searching for ways to do their job better-error free. Continually improve or perish. You must create a very efficient money-making organization to survive. This means you must be able to compete with the best of companies. You do this by becoming a "World Class" Organization. By that I mean you must deliver the highest quality services and products at the lowest possible cost when your Customer wants them - no sooner or later. Quality, price and delivery, this is what we all want when we buy goods and services. To be "World Class" you must optimize all the productive resources at your disposal. The talent-your employees, the equipment-your business systems employed properly and materials that meets or exceeds your Customers' requirements. Quality levels approaching Six Sigma (3.4 failures per million opportunities) with an ultimate goal of zero defects in everything you do-failures and errors virtually eliminated. Cost reduction becomes part of the culture-credits and refunds must be kept near zero. Keeping Customer commitments all the time, which includes delivering when your Customer wants you to. This...
